With this relaunching of its Globalization Dialogues project, the Center for Global Studies aims to enrich and diversify the globalization discussion at George Mason University. This session features three new faculty members from a variety of disciplinary perspectives whose research focuses explicitly on different aspects of the globalization debates. These Globalization Dialogues offer a unique opportunity to discuss new trends in debates on globalization.

Benjamin Cowan, History and Art History

Rashmi Sadana, Sociology and Anthropology

J.P. Singh, Global Affairs
J.P. Singh’s recent book, Globalized Arts (Columbia UP, 2011), shows how the integration of entertainment industries into international markets gives rise to far-reaching cultural anxieties. J.P. received his Ph.D. at the University of Southern California in 1995.

Thursday, September 27, 2012
4:30 pm – 6:00 pm
Mason Hall, Meese Room
Fairfax Campus

Light refreshments will be served.

This event is cosponsored by Latin American Studies